DEAN STANDISH PERKINS & ASSOCIATES ANNOUNCES MERGER WITH THE LAW OFFICES OF KAREN J. ZIMMER, P.S.

Merger Continues Zimmer's Legacy of Excellence in Legal Counsel

SEATTLE, Wash. (August 5th) – Dean Standish “Stan” Perkins today announced the merger of his personal injury law firm – Dean Standish Perkins & Associates (DSP) – with the Law Offices of Karen J. Zimmer, P.S. Ms. Zimmer passed away in July 2016 after nearly 30 successful years of practicing personal injury law in the Seattle area, and initiated the deal prior to her passing.

Operating now as Dean Standish Perkins & Associates, Zimmer’s legal partner Richard Aquire also joins the firm. Stan Perkins, DSP’s founding partner, said the merger was bittersweet, “As a colleague, friend, and former classmate of Karen’s (both attended Seattle University School of Law), we worked closely together over the past 30 years. When Karen approached me several weeks ago with the prospect of merging our two firms, I was immediately honored and excited at the prospect of working closely with her, as we shared the same values and commitment to client customer services and satisfaction. I am humbled that she trusted me to continue her legacy of providing superb advocacy to her clients.”

Dean Standish Perkins & Associates is a client-focused, results-oriented personal injury law firm with a practice dedicated to representing injured people and their families. The firm has helped thousands of people recover millions in compensation in personal injury and wrongful death cases throughout the state of Washington. Its attorneys and highly trained staff have been living and working in the Seattle area for almost 30 years, and are proud of our reputation for honesty and ethical representation.

Justin Farmer, founding partner of Private Practice Transitions, a Seattle professional business consulting and brokerage services firm, facilitated the merger.
